Fentanyl

Medetomidine is a very strong non-opioid tranquilizer—much stronger than xylazine (200x).

It slows down breathing and heart rate and can make overdoses longer and more complicated. Medetomidine is potentially dangerous to the heart.

The combination of fentanyl and medetomidine increases risk of overdose and can lead to significant sedation. Overdose symptoms may last beyond administration of naloxone.

If you have a drug that looks like this, get it tested before using. Drug checking is available from 9 to 4 Mon-Fri (excluding holidays) at ANKORS in Cranbrook. Call or text 250-426-3383 for more information.
